I was thinking that I did not like the hyphen so very much and Tom agreed so we were going with PERSA (which is very close to Persia which is now Iran, a country that many people hate so we thought it appropriate).

If having it everywhere is easiest, that works fine. Plus, we don't want to be accused of hiding the ball.

Alicia- I am very proud of the way to have responded to this latest change of mind from the philosophical side. Thank you very much.

Is it PERS-A or PERSA?

Do you want all the entry screens to change the headings on top of each column? It would probably be easiest if we use the same terminology across all - the worksheet capture system and the final PE.

A-PES!!!!??? Please, please, please tell me that you are not going to hold me (and you, but mostly me) up to public ridicule by giving Bozajian, Ipsen, and Loren Naiman this kind of ammunition. Referring to our attorney staff as simians may be accurate but is not called for at all. The clever use of the hyphen really does not disguise this reference from even our most devolved staff.

If we must include Attorney in the title, how about Performance Evaluation for Attorneys Review System (PEARS) - fruit is good for you. . .it makes you regular.

Hello everyone -

My vote (with concurrence from Julie) is for A-PES. I like the fact that in the name and acronym, it is clear that this is an attorney PE system.

Once again, kudos to all of you for all of your hard work on this project. The worksheet looks fantastic.

Seriously, don't be frightened. This is a really easy one. We need a name. We have been using Performance Evaluation Revision Committee (PERC) to refer to our work on the PEs but we are leaving committeehood and embarking on actual practice so the people in Systems who like stuff to have names and like it if the names make sense and like it if the names come with a workable acronym have proposed the below options. Before they got all serious on us, we had some funny ones but Alicia wants to get serious now so she has submitted the below list. At one point I wanted to go with Workplan Evaluating Employee's Performance (WEEP) but didn't think you all would go for that . . . Tom liked Performance-Employee Workplan Evaluation (P-EWE) . . . Alicia liked Performance Evaluation Workplan (PEW), while this could cause some folks to think of church, it was far more likely that they would think of bodily functions. . . so, anyway, then Alicia wanted to get serious and submitted the below list.

I like Performance Evaluation Review System (PERS) best, myself but thought you might want to weigh in on the final decision.
